THE WEATHER.

The record of the thermometer yesterday in front of C. W. Brandon's drug store was: 7 a. m., 33 degrees above; 12 m., 40 degrees above; 4 p. m., 42 degrees above; 8 p. m., 38 degrees above.

ABOUT THE CITY.

Miss K. Coleman of Heinville, this county, is a patient at St. Ann's hospital.

The registry office for the coming city election will be at King & Kennedy's store.

Deputy Sheriff Frank Stobbins came in from Deer Lodge yesterday and summoned a number of citizens to act as jurors next Monday at Deer Lodge.

Judge O'Leary filed bonds on appeal in the case of the two Chinamen, convicted of keeping an opium joint. The bonds were for $300 in each case and D. R. Beck and W. J. Johnson are the bondsmen.

Ed Dwyer, who has been under the care of one of the staff of physicians at St. Ann's hospital since last June, was taken to Butte yesterday to have his leg amputated above the knee, and thus save his life.

Neil Collins woke up yesterday morning with a severe attack of pneumonia and is now under treatment at St. Ann's hospital. Mr. Collins has many friends in Anaconda and Carroll who will regret to hear of his illness.

Three toughs stole two lap robes last night about 8 o'clock from Barrett & Jacky's harness store in Main street, and were captured by Officers White and O'Brien with the robes in their possession. They are trying to sell the robes to a First street livvyman. The same toughs were begging on the streets yesterday, and are all around vags, the police say.

EDWARDS GOES FREE

An Interesting Case in the Magistrate's Court.

A CASE OF SELF-DEFENSE

So the Defendant Claimed in Court.—The Judge Doubts Whether a Jury Would Convict Edwards.

In Judge Rockwell's court yesterday afternoon the case of the State vs. Frank K. Edwards was called up on preliminary hearing. This is the noted action in which Edwards was charged with an assault with intent to commit murder upon the person of Heck McLean on the 15th inst.

The state was represented by the county attorney, W. H. Rodgers, who was assisted by Mr. English, while the defendant appeared on his own behalf without the assistance of counsel. The court room was crowded to its utmost capacity by a throng of witnesses and spectators, the only interested party not present being the wounded man McLean, who is still confined to his room.

The first witness called for the prosecution was Dixie Raymer, whose evidence was to the effect that she resided over Heck McLean's saloon, but said she was not in the saloon at the time of the shooting, though she had been in the building on and off that day. She did not know whether the wounded man possessed a revolver or not.

The next witness called was Jessie Dillon, who claimed to know all the circumstances surrounding the matter. She testified as follows: She was in the saloon at the time the shooting occurred. Edwards was playing on the piano; McLean told him to stop, but the defendant did not pay any heed to the request. McLean then walked over to the defendant and renewed his request, which was acceded to. The defendant then walked over to the bar, when McLean ordered him out of the house, saying, "it's my saloon." At the time McLean was standing at the corner of the bar and Edwards was going towards the door. The next thing the witness knew she heard the report of a pistol and saw the weapon in the defendant's hand. McLean then came from behind the bar and advanced toward the defendant and clutched with him. She saw the wounded man knock Edwards' hand up as he fired one shot, then became confused, but remembered hearing several shots, and seeing the defendant leave the house. She did not notice any weapon in McLean's hand, but noticed he was bleeding about the neck.

Frankie Harris was then called; she stated she was not present when the trouble occurred, and did not know anything concerning the matter, so was excused.

Camille Dipeolo and Giuseppe Casciate, two Italians, testified through an interpreter exactly alike, using the same language in many instances. They stated they were playing cards when the trouble took place. Edwards came into the saloon and commenced playing the piano. McLean crossed the room to where the defendant was; heard McLean order Edwards out of the house three or four times and then saw the wounded man come from behind the bar with something in his hand, telling the defendant if he did not leave he would hit him. Neither of the witnesses knew what McLean had in his hand, but whatever it was it dropped on the floor, and before McLean had time to pick it up, Edwards commenced shooting, firing five shots in all.

Martin Shaffer was next called and substantially corroborated the evidence given by the two preceding witnesses, saying he did not know what kind of a weapon McLean had in his hand, but after it fell on the floor and McLean tried to pick it up, "that was the time he got it in the neck," the witness said.

Charles Gauthier told a somewhat different story relative to the shooting, testifying that when McLean ordered the defendant to cease playing the piano he used a most opprobrious epithet, which he repeated several times. When he ordered Edwards out of the house McLean reached over the bar and picked up a gun and walked towards Edwards, who told him he was not armed and did not want to fight. Then he saw McLean hit defendant over the head with a revolver. It was after the gun had fallen on the floor and McLean was trying to recover it that the defendant shot.

Then Chief of Police Pagan testified to the position of the bullet holes in the walls and floor, and to the fact of the defendant giving himself in charge.

Edwards then made a statement to the court in his own behalf which virtually corroborated the testimony of Charles Gauthier showing that he was under an apprehension of bodily fear when he fired the shots. He said he was not under the influence of liquor at the time, and had smoked only a little opium which had the effect of making him feel cleaner.

The court in giving his decision stated, that though he did not think that the defendant justified in taking such extreme measures, he doubted very much, if the case were presented to a jury, whether the defendant could be convicted and therefore discharged him.

CITY FATHERS IN SESSION.

Appointment of Judges and Clerks for the ensuing Election.

The city council met in special session last evening. Upon the roll being called the mayor and the following members were found to be present: Aldermen Burke, Barkovich, FitzPatrick, Kane, Murray and Shovlin.

After allowing a few bills, a petition was read from the people's party club requesting the appointment of Joseph Wright as registration agent in the place of Judge Mayhew, resigned. After considerable discussion Frank Kennedy was appointed to fill the position.

Alderman Shovlin addressed the meeting on the question of the short time allowed in which to register, claiming that five days was not sufficient, and that it should be extended to at least eight. The matter was thoroughly debated and a resolution adopted authorizing the clerk to draw up an ordinance extending the time to eight days.

The following judges and clerks for the coming city election were appointed: First ward, judges: Hugh Daly, S. D. Root, Ed. O'Brien, John Morris and L. E. Beaudry. Clerks: C. H. Sanders and Paddy Welsh. The voting place designated being the Planter's house.

Second ward, judges: John Gyllenberg, J. V. Surprenant, N. H. Morley and John Wegner and E. P. Steven. Clerks: Charley Collins and Harry Pierce. Voting place, engine house.

Third ward, judges: D. Cohen, ex. D. D. Walker, W. H. Harrison, James D. McKay and Dr. D. J. McKensie. Clerks: Winnie Sparrow and Joseph Wright. Voting place, French hall.

Fourth ward, judges: G. B. Winston, Charles Graham, Charles Williams, A. Friend and Pierce Siele. Clerks: Charles Sparrow and Charles A. Myers. Voting place, Methodist church, West Park avenue.

Upon the motion of Alderman Barkovich a new street light was ordered at the corner of Third and Birch streets. Thereupon the council adjourned until Monday evening at 8 o'clock.
